Cahill said a judgment on file against Peconi would first have to be cleared up, and Peconi said he signed a second mottgage when Cahill showed him $300, which he was to use to clear the matter up.

At Cahill's request. Peconi said, he signed a bill of saie for the colt to Mrs. Cahill. The judgment, he said, has not been paid, nor the loan secured. Peconi says he was ordered out by the lawyer when he visited his office to suggest that something ought to be done, and that the lawyer put his hand threateningly to his hip pocket. He decided having a stilletto.

Peconi was allowed to go on his own recognizance by Justice Keys and later went before the Grand Jury to state his grievance against Cahill.
